Great Strides in the cure for Cystic Fibrosis

Cystic Fibrosis is a disease that affects over 30,000 children and young adults in this country. Unfortunately, many people are not aware of the affects of this sad disease and therefore don't get the necessary tests that would detect this illness before a child is born.

The disease affects digestion and the lungs and requires daily care to keep it under control. Recently, there have been advances in the treatment of this disease and thanks to the CF Foundation awareness has been raised in the community.... that's where Stanley comes in.

Meet Stanley, he's 20 months old and suffers from Cystic Fibrosis. He is representing the CF Foundation's Great Strides Walk in Manhattan on May 12. His picture and story can be seen by millions of people daily on the Toys R Us monitor in Times Square and he has his very own website to help educate people and raise funds for Cystic Fibrosis research. Because of organizations like the CF Foundation, Stanley's life expectancy has increased to 33 and with the support of caring people hopefully he will have many more years with and all the people that love him.

Great Strides Walk for Cystic Fibrosis is on Thursday, May 12 at Carl Schurz Park in NYC. Visit Stanley's website www.iloves-tanleynyc.com for more information, to make a contribution or to join the walk.
